Teaching

Experience

At Providence College, where I am currently on sabbatical leave (2021–2022), I am responsible for primary teaching in ancient philosophy, metaphysics, and in a core curriculum in the humanities, and am the primary faculty member for all courses in our logic curriculum. I have taught courses and given lectures in ancient philosophy, the history of analytic philosophy, and logic in Basel, Fribourg, Gothenburg, Heidelberg, and (at the graduate level) at Brown University.

Two experiences in my teaching have been particularly formative. For several years (c. 2004–2014), I taught a wide range of courses in ancient philosophy, the theory of argumentation and science, epistemology and metaphysics, at undergraduate and graduate levels at the Humboldt-Universität. This gave me extensive experience in teaching in German and in a seminar environment, on a wide array of subjects. The other experience was in a highly intensive course in Ancient Greek. I have twice taught an accelerated graduate reading program in Ancient Greek (at the Latin/Greek Institute, City University of New York: 2007 & 2010), and twice taught the accelerated basic course in Ancient Greek (also at the Latin/Greek Institute, City University of New York: 2001 & 2002). Teaching in this very special program enabled me to bring students to an advanced reading in Ancient Greek, a type of teaching which I would gladly introduce in Fribourg for the purposes of networking local students with other scholars and junior researchers throughout the world.

Interdisciplinary teaching projects

I have taught in interdisciplinary courses in the core curriculum of Providence College for four years, and was responsible for developing interdisciplinary modes of teaching in Classics at the Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin, 2009–2014. This was one of my tasks as coordinator of the August-Boeckh-Antikezentrum. I co-taught a course on “The transformation of Classical antiquity in Rome” with colleagues from the fields of archaeology, ancient history, Renaissance studies, and the vice-director of the Vatican Museums in Rome; the course ended with a week-long excursion to Rome and the Vatican. Another project I have developed together with students was a week-long graduate conference on Aristotle’s Posterior Analytics. An international group of graduate students was able to read and discuss selected passages of Aristotle’s Posterior Analytics and its reception in Latin and Arabic philosophy under the guidance of leading scholars.

In the summer of 2015, I directed an international summer school and conference entitled Globalized Classics at the Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin. This is to be the first of a series of international events on Classics in the context of their global reception.
